SN	Description
1	Dr. Reshma Tendulkar introduced Prof. Dr. Milind Umekar(MU) & Prof. Dr. Brijesh Taksande (BT) and welcomed them on the behalf of Mr. B. L. Boolani Sir, Mrs. Jharana Das Madam and Principal Dr. Supriya Shidhaye.
2	Dr. Anand Chintakrindi presented the Gap Analysis of NIRF and sought advice from Dr. Umekar and Dr. Taksande for the following points:
3	Perception Survey: It should be done for the classes and not for the masses. NIRF sends the perception link to the industrialists, top educationalists and academicians. They advised us to enquire about Engineering and Management Colleges under Vivekanand Trust regarding receiving the perception link. If so, then to convince the Colleges to select VESCOP in the Perception Survey. There should be one-to-one interaction for branding of VESCOP with academicians of top 10 Colleges in Pharmacy. MU suggested forming a cluster with other Pharmacy Colleges to support each other in Perception Survey.

4	Publications: BT advised to pay attention to the affiliations before submitting your manuscript. He suggested encouraging each student to publish at least one review and one research article. He also shed light on the topic of interdisciplinary citations among departments. BT endorsed the Paper Writing Skills Workshop and 3 months course on Scientific Writing for the students by Smt. Kishoritai Bhojar College of Pharmacy (SKBCOP). He mentioned to make it mandatory for each faculty to write 2 publications every year in Scopus or web of science listed journals.
5	Patents: BT suggested to formulate a policy to identify patentable M. Pharm and PhD projects; for which patents can be submitted, published and granted in the future.
6	Footprint of Projects and Professional Practice: BT highlighted that good research activity leads to good publications in indexed journals which finally leads to grants from higher funding agencies giving rise to increased provision for more equipment. MU advised that 90% eligible faculty should send research proposals to funding agencies. BT gave information about the DST-SURE Grants worth Rs. 30 Lakhs. The Research Coordinator of the College should track on various research proposals from DST, DBT, ICMR, SERB. He also suggested surfing the website www.indiascience.org .
7	Financial Resources and their Utilization: BT advised to keep a track on the financial expenditure incurred for each student; which includes recurring and non-recurring expenditures. Non-recurring expenditures: It includes instrument procurement, advancement to laboratory and library expenses. Recurring expenditures: It includes Salary, Workshops, Seminars and Training Programmes for faculty and students.
8	Combined Metric for Faculty with PhD and Experience: BT explained the three slabs for faculty experience i.e., 0-8 Years, 8-15 Years, more than 15 Years. In order to achieve full marks in this criterion, it is necessary for the ratio to be 1:1:1. He insisted on making every faculty register for PhD and suggested concession in fees for the faculty.
9	Combined Metric for Placement and Higher Studies: MU developed Pharma HR Society in SKBCOP which is involved in the collaboration with various industries, initiating visits with industries for placement. They have organized HR Summit with 40 HR Professionals to encourage placements. SKBCOP has also received various instruments from FTIR, HPLC, Auto-Sampler from different companies. The college has to approach the industry proactively and develop collaboration for the placement or research.
10	MU emphasized that all faculty in VESCOP should be encouraged to pursue PhD; which will surely help to gain extra marks in NIRF Survey.

Principal Dr. Supriya Shidhaye thanked Dr. Umekar and Dr. Taksande for their valuable guidance.

Is Oncolytic Virotherapy a permanent cure for malignant gliomas?

Abstract: Of all malignant glioma forms, glioblastoma is the most frequently present form. The treatment of this highly aggressive tumor form by applying conventional therapies is of low success, leading to a low survival rate. As representatives of immunotherapeutic agents, oncolytic viruses contribute to the revolution in cancer therapy. Although promising, the efficiency of oncolytic viruses for treating glioblastoma is also limited. This is a reason why further optimization of oncolytic virotherapy is necessary. In this work, we review some of glioblastoma's specificities and provide information about the current status of oncolytic virotherapy.

Keywords: Tumors; Virotherapy; Oncolytic viruses.

1. Introduction

Glioblastoma accounts for 57% of occurrences among all malignant glioma forms and represents the most frequent cause of death when malignant brain tumors are taken into account [1]. This commentary discusses the application of Oncolytic Virotherapy for curing gliomas and highlights various outcomes of the research performed for the practicability of the treatment. The prevalence of glioblastoma accounts for about 0.59 to 5 per 100,000 individuals. The rates continue to rise in many countries. Treating glioblastoma is complex, using chemotherapy, radiotherapy, and debulking surgery. The success rate of surgical debulking is also low, as tumor resection depends upon its associated neurological impairment and location [2]. Recent studies suggest the use of immune checkpoint inhibitors (ICIs). Still, response span and magnitude in solid tumors are found to be fickle. Also, the high molecular heterogeneity of the tumor cells hinders many techniques for curing gliomas. Oncolytic virotherapy is a technique that uses genetically engineered viruses that can preferentially replicate themselves and destroy cancer cells while keeping the surrounding healthy cells unharmed [3]. Oncolytic viruses (OV) kill cancer cells through various mechanisms like apoptosis, pyroptosis, and necroptosis. The characteristic of glioma is the immunosuppressive tumor microenvironment (TME); immunosuppression is caused owing to the evolution of T cell tolerance against tumor-selective antigens. Integrating modern medicine and traditional herbs in the treatment of Endometriosis

Abstract: Endometriosis is the proliferation of various tissues that resemble the uterine lining; these tissues develop inside lower abdominal reproductive organs, such as the ovaries, fallopian tubes, tissues that support the uterus, and other uterine surface regions. The lungs, brain, and skin are examples of non-pelvic tissues where spreadability was seen. However, endometrial-problem may also result in Ovarian Cancer and breast cancer if proper treatment of endometriosis in women is ignored. In conventional pharmaceutical therapies, nonsteroidal anti-inflammatory drugs, as well as androgens, aromatase inhibitors, selective progesterone receptor modulators, oral contraceptives, and gonadotropin-releasing hormone agonists, are used.

Keywords: Endometriosis; Disease of women; Disease therapy.

1. Introduction

Endometriosis is characterized by the growth of tissue that resembles endometrium outside the uterus. About 10% of women of reproductive age are affected, mostly [1]. According to estimates, endometriosis affects 1 in 9 women of reproductive age in Australia and the United States [2]. Tissue from the uterus migrates and implants itself in other parts of the body due to endometriosis [3]. This tissue interacts with the body's neurological, endocrine, muscular, skeletal, and vascular systems, leading to various uncomfortable symptoms and physiological changes [4]. Dysmenorrhea, discomfort from endometriosis, and infertility are the three main signs and symptoms of endometriosis [5]. Also, surgery can be an option as one of the treatments [6]. Due to synthetic medications' negative impacts and toxicity, natural products have played a significant role in human medical care. Approximately 80% of people worldwide seek primary care using traditional methods. Additionally, several contemporary medications used to treat human and animal ailments are derived from plants [7]. The use of traditional herbs in combination with modern medicines can provide a synergistic effect, and also herbs could help in analyzing new drug targets in the treatment of endometriosis.
