CROWN VS CONVENTIONAL FLAT PLATE SOLAR HEATERS - COMPARISON OF BENEFITS

Features	Conventional Flat Plate Solar Heaters	Miracle Solar Geyser
Sun tracking	No sun tracking possible due to flat surface collector. Maximum heat absorption only at 12 Noon	Circular glass tubes allow Auto Sun tracking and ensures maximum heat absorption (>93%) throughout the day
Effect of External Weather and ambient temperature	Design dependent on ambient temperature results in low efficiency during cold weather	Design independent of ambient temperature ideal even during winters
Effect of Hard water	System efficiency drops drastically as hard water causes scaling and chokes the narrow metallic absorber pipes (12 mm). Leaks could also develop. Frequent expensive cleaning essential. Tank cleaning manually impossible due to completely sealed design.	Non-metallic glass tubes of much larger diameter (37mm) prevents choking and ensures maximum efficiency and life of the system without frequent cleaning and maintenance. Glass tubes and tanks can be cleaned manually.
Start-up and heating time	Delayed heating process from cold to hot. Takes more than 5 hours.	Low start-up time from cold to hot in just 2 to 3 hours.
Connections between collectors and storage tank	Uses internal connection pipes that result in heat loss and reduces system life.	Integrated design eliminates interconnecting pipes completely.
Number of collectors for a 100 LPD system	9 or 10 fins	15 evacuated glass tubes
Installation space requirement (for 100 LPD)	Base length of 10 feet. Can be mounted only on roof. Cannot be used for multi storied apartments due to heat loss in lengthy pipes from roof.	Balcony type cantilever mounting possible. Ideal for multi storied apartments, reducing hot water piping.
Relative position of cold water tank	Cold-water tank must be mounted at a height of about 7 to 8 feet from the base of the system.	Cold-water tank could be mounted at a height of only 4 feet from the base of the system.
